Blatchford A. M., President of the Academy, January 22, 1878: With the Reports of the Secretary and Treasurer Of this collection it may be said that the prominent mammals of North America are here well represented. Of birds we have specimens of all the orders but the ostrich, and of most of the families of North American birds. We have a fair representation of the freshwater fishes of the country, also a good collection of shells, and a very nearly complete collection of Florida corals. In this connection we gratefully recognize, and not for the first time, the valuable services of our faithful life member, Dr. J. W. Velie. In the winter of 1871 and 1872 Dr. Velie accompanied our lamented Stimpson to the Gulf, and such time as could be secured from his constant and kindly ministrations to the invalid in his feeble and rapidly declining condition, was devoted to collecting and preserving specimens, principally from the strait between Cuba and Yucatan. Dredgings were also made off the...
