Excerpt: . to all mankind; otherwise we shall meet with only partial success--perhaps absolute failure. We are bound together by invisible ties. We possess the same life, and are controlled and directed by the same Intelligence. It is through advancing into a more harmonious relationship with one another that we gradually arrive at a comprehension of the unity of life. On every side we perceive many degrees of development--all good, for they represent so many stages of growth. We find persons that have developed but little more than their sense-nature. They might be spoken of as being on the animal plane of existence. All their happiness is to be found in the things that appeal to them from the stand-point of the senses. They enjoy what they eat and drink--in fact all their pleasures are in the physical world. Such a person may be perfectly...
