Permit me now to state the important facts in the case. The discovery of Petroleum on a great scale in California is a fact now well established, and chiefly along or near the sea-shore, in the counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, where its occurrence in accessible positions and surrounded by arable lands and in a delightful climate, has led to the early incorporation of these lands in the hands of powerful Companies, based on the expectation of doing a large and permanent business. Among the most favored of all these localities, so far as they have fallen under my own observation, is the large estate amassed in Santa Barbara County by your own Company. The lands owned in fee simple by the Philadelphia and California Petroleum Company comprise the whole of three large ranchos adjoining each other, and embracing collectively, nearly two hundred thousand acres of land.
