Excerpt: .beautiful Confraste, that I mentioned just now, he is always capable of seizing and fixing humanity in its most varied aspects, and in its most diverse manifestations. Portraitist he is, even in his landscapes, such as Saint Ouen, 7 u desfortzfcations, in which he marks with as much care and study of character and expression the essential features of a landscape, as though they formed parts of the human face. Nothing could be more keenly painful than this Parisian /aubourg setting. as the artist has seen and presented it. Bring near it the portrait of The C/ze//ii//eau; the same hand engraved these two amazing pages, with the same love of truth, the same intense feeling. M. Chahine s portrait of M. Alfred Stevens, M. Anatole France, and M. Cornely, are perfect things both from the documentary and the artistic points of view. Wonderful to note the skill with which he traces the features of the old Flemish master, his dignified, aristocratic air, the keenness of the eye which has seen so much, the delicacy of the hand which has wrought so many lovely works. And in the portrait of M. Anatole France, how well he has indicated the psychology of the great writer, his invincible curiosity to taste and to know everything, his light irony, his laughing wisdom. All this is divined by the expression of the eyes, the curve of the lip, the pose, and the expression generally. all time to the advantage...
