Play the last six measures briskly and peppery. No pedal. Harold Bauer says: I am strongly convinced that too much time is spent on the externals of piano playing and not enough in reaching the heart of the matter. It is the end that counts, not the means, especially if the means are of such a character as will never take one to the end. I want you to look upon this as a lesson in expression; in the technic of expression. Catch the spirit back of it all and all will be well with you and your interpretation. # Every fifth measure is numbered in order to facilitate reference to Mr. Orth's lesson. See opposite page. H These four measures may be played somewhat more quietly than the previous Allegretto Tempo requires, but with the following/ he regular...
